also of flotes of dawn the answer;
O'er the foam's white track,
God's work done, so to our homeland
Comes her hosting back.

'Come the dead men with the live men, From the marshes far, From the mounds in no man's valley, Lit by cross nor star,

"Come to blend with hers the essence.

Of their strength and pride.

All the radiance of the dreaming

For whose truth they died." "So the dead men with the live men Pass an hosting fair, And the stone is rolled forever From the soul's despair."

And be it dream, the poet is a seer;
To him the stellar distances are near;
Turough Space unmeasured with unhampered scope
He walks illumined pathways where we grope.

Poet and sage! we thank thee here Poet and sage! we thank thee here again.—
Long may thy numbers shape the thoughts of men.
With more than words of praise each heart aspires;
Accept the incense from our humbler fires!
